SUMMARY OF ST. LOUIS MARKETS.
 Yesterday's local grain market was in many respects a repetition of Wednesday's. Again there was a weak opening, but later in the session professional buying raised prices on the upturn and all active options closed with a good advance. As on the previous day, the market finished with a "feeling of a strong market." Small traders watched the big fellows closely and whenever a big line was shown in the advance there was a rush to cover against a possible corner in Dec. Openings were easy on heavy receipts and favorable weather, but in the last hour nearly everybody was on the buying side. It was a typical speculative market, with the outsider watching for the cue to jump.

Speculators are Active in Wheat and Corn.
MARKET ADVANCES, DESPITE NEWS.
Fear of a Squeeze Causes Small Traders to Follow Professional Lead.

Speculative manipulation kept both wheat and corn on the up turn after a rather quiet opening yesterday. In the first hour of the session small traders were anxious to take profits. The market was strong and there was an increase in the local stock and a lack of buying interest in Chicago. Weather conditions continued favorable. Light in the session, the professional buyer freely despite the fact that there were no export sales and outside were not quick to respond to the advance. There was again a vague feeling that a corner in wheat was being worked, and a corner in corn was being worked.
